ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a storage network including at least a computer system, at least an external storage and at least a network system for communication of input/output data between the computer system and the external storage, a method of collecting the performance data on the network system and the software operated on the network system is disclosed, in which the range or degree of data collection is automatically adjusted as required based on the performance data collected.